

CF304 PRINCIPLES OF ENVIRONMENTAL ANALYSIS

INTRODUCTION

The "environment" includes the physical, social, cultural, and spiritual factors which surround a person. It includes all parts of society in which a person lives, works, and ministers. This course will introduce the subject of the environment, define the term and explain how the environment relates to the mission of the Church.

Environmental analysis is a skill which leads to understanding the environments in which people live and how they affect efforts to reach them with the Gospel. Through the course Environmental analysis is defined, types of such analysis are identified, perils to avoid are discussed, and the importance of environmental analysis explained.

The lessons in this course will guide you through various types of environmental analysis. As well as learning how to analyze your personal environment and that of people groups, areas, nations, regions, and organizations. The lessons emphasize that analyzing the environment is not enough in itself. You must use the results of your analysis for the purpose of spreading the Gospel.

In the natural world, you can study a field of ripening grain to determine its type and the best methods of harvest. But unless you apply what you learn...unless you actually reap the harvest...the precious grain will rot in the fields. The same is true in the spiritual world.
